Frankfort Lions Club Puts On Delightful Social Function

One of the most interesting and entertaining social affairs the Frankfort Lions club has sponsored was held Tuesday evening when the club entertained their wives and daughters at a chicken dinner in the Methodist church parlors.

Following the usual community sing and a busy round of collections made by the official tail twister, Herbert J. Lambrecht, the dinner was concluded and the Lions and guests went to the Frankfort school auditorium where pinochle and buncoco was played for several hours and all enjoyed a very delightful evening. There were a number of high scores in cards and at the buncoco table Editor Wm. Semmler was as much surprised as were the other players when he scored a total of 23 games.

Prizes were awarded as follows: Men's first, A. J. Heusner, consolation John Weitendorf.

Ladies first, Miss Marjorie Knight consolation, Mrs. J. C. Knight.

Buncoco, first prize Wm. Semmler, consolation Mrs. Herbert Lambrecht.

The Lions plan to hold more of these social activities as a result of the very successful dinner and party of Tuesday night.

Hallowe'en decorations and favors were much in evidence.

Leo Whitcomb brother of the groom served as best man.

A reception was held in the home of the bride's sister Mrs. N. Larson in South Holland to about 35 relatives.

Mr. Whitcomb the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Whitcomb, is a former Frankfort boy. He and his bride have the best wishes of his Frankfort friends. Sheldon is employed by Farnsworth Radio and Television Co. in Marion, Ind. He also is an Amateur radio operator, his call letters being W9MXV.

New Lenox School Patrol Question Remains Unsettled

When the New Lenox Civic club first proposed the movement to have electric flashers and gates installed at the Rock Island crossing at Cedar Road, the matter of a school patrol was taken up with the school board and it was agreed that such a patrol would be organized but nothing has been done thus far.

Since the installation of the flashers and gates the parents of children residing on the north side of the Rock Island tracks have been criticizing the Civic club for the lack of a school patrol, but officials of the club point out that the matter now rests with the school board. It is said the reason why some of the parents have become much agitated over the lack of additional protection at the crossing is due to the fact that a number of smaller children have paid no attention to the flashers and when the gates were lowered they crawled under the gates and ran over the crossing while trains were approaching. It is hoped that the needed patrol system will be organized and put into effect before any serious accident occurs.

Mokena Royal Blue Moves Into New Quarters

Irvin Howes owner of the Royal Blue Store in Mokena moved his store and residence from the Krapp building on Front street into his new quarters in the former Homerding place across the street, Saturday night. Mr. Howes has a neat store in the new location.

Mokena Civic Group Votes To Buy A Memorial Plaque

The Mokena Civic Association met Tuesday evening and this meeting was both lively and full of business.

The Extension and Improvement committee reported it had purchased and presented to the Mokena school a rack which holds 24 bicycles and received a very nice letter of thanks from the teachers and student committee.

The skating rink committee reported the rink in excellent condition after much work on it and that they will have a misting machine made to freeze it properly.

It was voted to procure a special memorial plaque and have it placed near the Cannon in Pioneer cemetery as a memorial to the Revolutionary and Civil War veterans there buried. Also to work with other organizations in order to keep this sacred spot in a presentable and attractive condition. In this connection some time ago funds were voted to set all stones in concrete. The Village and Garden Club to stand an equal part in the expense and the committee was asked to ascertain why the work was not being done.

A special committee was appointed for Christmas exercises and the usual tree will be erected. This committee was instructed to function with other clubs or societies for exterior displays and authorized to offer prizes for the best decorations, if others joined in the movement.

The Entertainment Committee was instructed to have a Ladies' night in the immediate future and really show the girls a good time. Retiring President Raymond McGuire was presented with a handsome gold pen and pencil set.

In presenting this for the Association Past President R. A. Bechstein remarked that the ancient Greeks in all of their institutions and architecture placed three columns, namely the Doric, Ionic and Corinthian, allegorically representing Wisdom, Strength and Beauty, so now the Mokena Civic Association had placed two, Wisdom and Strength and now had the third Beauty coming up.

He also said that he knew Ray was going to like this token of appreciation because his wife said he would. Mr. McGuire in turn thanked the members very kindly.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 p.m. with the Rev. Everett Ashley of Joliet, brother of the deceased's widow officiating.

Frankfort Hybrid Seed Corn Dealer Operates In 3 Counties

Farmers of this area will be pleased to know that the Crow Hybrid Corn Co., of Milford, Ill., has placed Kendall County under the sales supervision of Geo. Brandau of Frankfort as added to Will and Cook Counties.

It may be of interest to the farmers of this community who plan on attending the State Corn Husking contest at Tonica, Ill., near Streator, Ill., sponsored by Prairie Farmer on the Schafer Farm on Oct. 31, will be in a fine field of Crow's Hybrid corn.

A recent check on the yield by the local contest committee last week, placed the yield of this field at 112-12 bu. per acre. Seed was furnished by the Crow's Hybrid Co. and is a commercial single cross developed by Dr. W. J. Mumm, their corn breeder. Some of this single cross is planted in this area and is giving excellent yields and quality. With a field of this quality and yield to husk in the County champions should have little trouble in running up a new husking record in the Illinois Husking contest.

It can be added that Tonica, Ill., will be the place where King Corn will have a 4-day celebration in his honor. Remember the dates, October 31, State Contest, November 1, Tour of LaSalle Co., November 2, Radio Programs and over a dozen bands, then on November 3rd the big National Corn Husking contest where an attendance of over 200,000 people is expected. Dozens and dozens of exhibitors will display their products, plan to attend, it will be a sight never forgotten, one of the greatest sports contests in our country.

AUTO DEALERS FEEL PINCH OF CAR AND TRUCK SHORTAGE

Small automobile dealers and garage operators in the smaller towns are beginning to feel the pinch of the priorities system which is killing off a very large portion of small business concerns throughout the country. Automobile dealers in Will and Cook counties are especially hard hit by the curtailment of new car production. Dealers in cities like Kankakee and Chicago Heights are said to be limited to 16 new cars a month while in the smaller country towns some dealers are only allowed one new car a month.

Repair parts and supplies are also very difficult to obtain in many instances. Some dealers who have been operating sub-garages in adjoining towns have found it necessary to close up such places and as a result throw men out of employment. With the addition of stiffening taxes it is going to be a real problem for many of the smaller concerns to stay in business.

These booklets outline the subjects to be discussed by various speakers for each meeting of the school year and contain other information relative to parent-teacher work. Each meeting incidentally, has been planned around some phase of the theme for the year. This theme is "Building Better Citizens". The Tuesday night meeting will highlight planned recreation in the home as an important aspect in the building of better citizens.

All parents, whether members of the local PTA or not, are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

ANTI-RAT CAMPAIGN TO OPEN IN WILL COUNTY ON NOVEMBER 7th

The announcement of a rat control campaign has received enthusiastic endorsement of farmers and others in Will county, according to County Agent Leonard W. Braham, who says that this project will result in a saving of thousands of dollars worth of stored food and other property.

The fact that rats migrate from one premises to another makes it a community problem that can be handled most effectively by concerted effort in applying methods of control, he points out. Hence the need of exposing poison baits, removing rat harbors, and rat-proofing corn cribs, feed bins and the like, at one time throughout the community.

It is not too late to place orders with distributors for prepared squill bait which will be available November 7. Where rats are numerous, this method will give the desired results.

In addition to the systematic use of rat bait, old fashioned rat killings are worth while to get quick results says Mr. Braham. Aside from providing sport for boys and dogs, if properly handled large numbers of rodents may be killed, and the dens and harboring places torn up and removed. Before the rats are disturbed, make adequate preparations so that as few rats as possible may escape, he advises. All rat holes or other places that might offer a means of escape should be blocked or removed. Then arm each participant with a good rat swatter, made by wiring an 18 inch length of heavy inner tube securely to the end of a two foot piece of hoe or fork handle. When everything is ready, proceed to rout out the rats by means of water, smoke, digging, and moving things. To finish the job, after the rats are killed, rearrange lumber piles, clean up and remove rubbish and trash of all kinds, and make the premises uninviting for rats to move in from surrounding farms or other places.

Recreation Building for Army Posts

Architect's drawing of hospital recreation building under construction at 65 army hospitals. The buildings will be furnished and operated by American Red Cross, which will provide motion pictures and other entertainments, and through its own staff carry on social service and recreation program. Each building will contain a theater, recreation room, small kitchen and guest-rooms for relatives summoned to bedside of soldiers. Living and office quarters for Red Cross staff also will be included in the building.

WASHINGTON.—The hospital nurse smiled as she held the telegram before the eyes of the woman on the bed.

It said, "Red Cross and my commanding officer say o. k. for me to come, will arrive hospital twelve hours, Red Cross lending train fare keep your chin up Mom." It was signed "Pete."

The nurse tried to describe the effect of that telegram on the anxious mother.

"Sort of like a blood transfusion," she said.

Telegrams like Pete's are making people realize more and more these days just how much the Red Cross manages to do for Uncle Sam's army and navy. American mothers are learning that the Red Cross will give their sons in camp definite practical help in time of trouble. Back in 1905 congress named the Red Cross the official link between the men in the American armed forces and their families at home; since that day the Red Cross has been the trouble shooter or "worry buster" of every soldier.

If there is illness at home, the Red Cross, through its local chapters and its field directors in each camp, will keep the boy posted with up-to-the-minute news. It will verify home conditions and, as in the case of Pete, help him obtain emergency furlough, or perhaps a dependency discharge. It will keep him well supplied with reading matter, entertain-tainment and comfort articles while he's sick in the hospital. It will help him find employment when he returns to civilian life and it will give assistance to his family when they are in trouble.

There is little that the Red Cross will not do for a serviceman. Recently a soldier was brought into a military hospital with both eyes totally and permanently blinded in an accident. A volunteer Red Cross worker there spent half a year teaching the boy to read braille.

Another army camp reports the case of a veteran's widow who was refused government compensation because officials lacked evidence of her husband's disability. During the next few months, a busy Red Cross field director wrote more than 200 letters on her behalf, finally unearthing the evidence which meant her livelihood.

Right now the Red Cross is busy constructing headquarters buildings for its staff at 62 army camps, and has undertaken to furnish and operate hospital recreation buildings in 65 army stations and general hospitals. Furnishings for the latter will include a theater and motion picture equipment, as well as offices and a lounge. Thanks to the Red Cross, American mothers can be perfectly sure that their convalescent sons will have plenty of medically approved entertainment while they are laid up.

Red Cross service to the armed forces covers a lot of ground. The army and navy recruit their nurses from the nursing reserve of the Red Cross. The present drive to collect 200,000 units of human blood plasma for the armed forces is another Red Cross assignment. And just to top things off, the women of this country, as volunteers in the ranks of the Red Cross, this year handed over to the United States army and navy over 28,000,000 surgical dressings, and are now starting upon a batch of 500,000 sweaters.

As one soldier put it, "Uncle Sam's our commanding officer, and he looks out for us the best he can. But the Red Cross—well, the Red Cross is Mrs. Sam."

Thoroughly feminine, tall, slender, blonde, her hobbies are perfect clothes and cats. Her costumes are of her own design and have resulted in her being called one of the best dressed women in the country. Her love for cats is exemplified by pets at her apartment at 40 Fifth avenue, New York, and by a parade of about 200 modeled figures of felines across the top of her editorial desk.

A descendant of Gov. William Bradford of Plymouth Colony, and the family of Sir Francis Bacon, she loves the West and usually spends her vacation there. One of her great-uncles, John Holbrook, was one of the noted sheriffs at Fort Dodge, Iowa, in early days, helping to bring about peace in a turbulent area. Hoosier Couplets Ready Now for Braille Readers Ortmeyer Humorous Verses Free to Blind People Anywhere in U. S. A.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Arthur H. Ortmeyer, well-known writer of couplets, who conducts a column in the Indianapolis News called "Hoosier Homespun," has widened his field of homespun philosophy and humor into braille. The couplets, some of which appear below, are now being distributed by the Indiana state library. The post office gives free postage, as it does with all braille publication in the U. S. Any sightless braille reader in the country may borrow for reading, the book "Life Lines" postage free, on application.

Alabama and Mississippi state libraries have asked for rights in publishing the book and the Library of Congress will begin issuing Ortmeyer's couplets soon. A few selections from the couplets follow:

Churning waters sing a paean
Even in a wash machine.
No double feature yet quite vice
With that of sunset and sunrise.

Ortmeyer goes humorous:

The soph replied: A Pharmacist!

A pancake with a non-skid tread!

Wright Cadet

Rural Folks Go to Church

The rural sections of the country are better promoters of Sunday school attendance than those in cities, according to a recent survey by the International Council of Religious Education. The chart above pictures the situation today, in accordance with figures released by the council. (1) 14,500,000 crimes in 1940. (2) 1 crime in 5 by boy or girl. (3) 185,000 U. S. Sunday schools. (4) Criminologists say church training prevents crimes.

CHICAGO.—Rural Americans have proven to be better Sunday school promoters than their city brothers, a survey made public here by the International Council of Religious Education discloses.

The first nation-wide survey of Sunday school distribution and attendance showed that 72 per cent of all church schools in the United States are found in rural areas of less than 2,500 population.

In attendance, however, the urbanites have an advantage. Sunday schools located in cities have an average enrollment of 210 compared to the rural church schools' 65. A nation-wide average of 114 is maintained.

Thirty-six Protestant denominations, co-operating through the International Council, operate Sunday schools in the United States and now have a total of 160,430 schools. Total pupil enrollment for these schools was announced as 20,772,141.

Dr. Mary Leigh Palmer, associate director of leadership education, made public the statistical findings of the survey.

Freezing of Farm Prices and Wages Seen Necessary to Prevent Inflation . . . Tax Issue Looms as Important in Local Elections . . .

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—Anyone who thinks that inflation—and unbridled inflation at that—can be prevented without freezing farm prices and wages should read one of two, preferably both, recent observations.

One of these was the testimony on Capitol Hill of Bernard M. Baruch. The other is a pamphlet issued by the Brookings Institution entitled "Effects of the Defense Program on Prices, Wages and Profits." The latter is by Dr. Meyer Jacobstein and Dr. Harold G. Moulton. Dr. Moulton is head of the Brookings Institution.

They are interesting chiefly because they demonstrate, emphatically and without heat, that nothing the government is doing or proposes to do will prevent runaway prices, and partial destruction, through this cutting of the value of the dollar, of all savings accounts, life insurance, social insurance benefits—in fact all forms of savings which are measured in dollars and not in goods.

It hits the government bond and the sock under the mattress equally in proportion. It hits the very defense bonds the public is being told are a good investment.

Issued on the Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's proposal of a boost in the social security tax from 2 to 6 per cent was announced, the authors of the Brookings pamphlet could not have been meaning to hit it. But they did. One of the admitted reasons for this proposed tax boost was to cut private purchasing power as a partial check on inflation.

Brookings' Statement

Say Drs. Jacobstein and Moulton: "The price advance cannot be directly attributed to the increases in mass purchasing power. If the general rise in prices had been due to competitive bidding by consumers possessed of increased incomes, one would expect to find retail prices increasing at least as much and as rapidly as the prices of manufactured products and raw materials. The facts show, however, that the increase in retail prices has been relatively small. The price rises began at the producing and not at the consuming end . . .

"The facts clearly show that the active forces leading to price advances in the present situation have been operating on raw materials and manufactured products, gradually spreading from there to the retail end . . .

"The prevailing belief in government circles that price rises could not occur so long as there remained a large volume of unemployed labor and capital goes far toward explaining why no deep concern was manifested until fairly recently over the price question, and why the Office of Price Administration was not set up until the spring of 1941. Had the nature of the price inflation process been clearly perceived, steps would doubtless have been taken at a much earlier date to control the sources of price disturbance.

No Control Provided

"The Office of Price Administration has no authority over the farm price program and no authority over wages . . . The price control bill now before congress does not provide for any control of wages, and control of farm prices cannot begin until 110 per cent of parity is reached. Since as this analysis has shown, the upward movement of prices is chiefly due to increases in the prices of agricultural products and in wage costs, it is obvious that the Office of Price Administration has no effective control over the price system as a whole."

Tax Issue And Local Elections

Joe Martin's conclusion that the folks in the West are keenly worked up about the new taxes, and his hope that the G.O.P. may win the next house as a result, may be discounted by the possibility of an appeal by administration leaders not to give the world the impression that the American people are not in sympathy with the war against Adolf Hitler. But if Martin is right about the interest in taxes, as would seem very logical, look out for primary upsets next spring and fall!

Outsiders aspiring to seats in the house and senate are likely to find taxes a heaven-sent issue. There is hardly a senator or representative who will not be pitifully vulnerable to a sharp attack by an opponent who studies the sitting member's record on appropriation roll calls.

Remember that these will be local contests. The sitting members will always be attacked for voting for appropriations in which their own constituents are not interested, but which can be made to appear heavily responsible for the boost in taxes.

Speech Restored To Boy Made Mute By Bomb Injury

Silent a Year, Child Talks After Brain Operation By U. S. Surgeon.

LONDON.—Royston Curtis, seven years old, is a shy boy. Speaking rarely and then only in monosyllables, he is the most silent of the young victims of the Luftwaffe's bombing in a hospital in the Midlands.

But that he can speak at all is one of the miracles of brain surgery and a tribute to the skill of a young American neuro-surgeon, Dr. Henry Heyl of the British War Relief society's American hospital in Britain, whose home is at New Canaan, Conn.

Until a year ago Roy was a normal boy, leading the typical life of youngsters of his age in a small town in South Wales. He lived with his mother, grandmother and his sister Margaret, aged three, in Neath. Then one night the Nazi night raiders attacked Swansea, a bomb was dropped on near-by Neath and Roy's small world collapsed on top of him.

Unconscious Four Weeks.

His grandmother was killed, but her supreme sacrifice saved the lives of the two children. Little Margaret escaped with scalp injuries, but Roy was all but killed. The left side of his skull was badly fractured and he was unconscious for four weeks. For a time he was paralyzed on the right side, but the paralysis disappeared during his convalescence.

As he regained his health, it became apparent that he had lost his power of speech. A story and photographs about him appeared in Life magazine and this attracted the attention of Dr. Heyl, who communicated with Roy's mother, Mrs. Winifred Curtis, and later consulted with the Welsh physicians attending him. As a result, Roy was taken to the neuro-surgical unit of the American hospital in Britain in a Midland hospital.

The British doctors and Dr. Heyl agreed there was a possibility of a blood clot pressing on the left frontal side of Roy's brain, where speech is controlled, and that this warranted surgical exploration. The operation, to hear Dr. Heyl speak of it was a simple matter.

Talks After Operation.

A horseshoe-shaped trap door of bone was sawed free in Roy's skull. Then the dura matter, which surrounds the brain as a protective covering, was opened, exposing the brain. The operation was performed on July 31, almost a year after Roy's injury, and it was found that an old blood blot, technically known as a subdural hematoma, was pressing against the brain, distorting the section known as Broca's area, which has a great deal to do with the control of speech.

This clot was removed and exploration disclosed another clot in the brain's substance—a subcortical hematoma. After the second clot was removed the bone flap was replaced.

That afternoon, when his nurses asked him how he felt, Roy replied, "All right." Next day, when his aunt brought him some sweets, he exclaimed, "Choc-o-lates!" and in the afternoon, when Dr. Heyl left him, he said, "Good-by." Since then he has been adding a few words each day to his vocabulary.

Roy's operation is only one of some 2,000 performed by the surgeons of the American hospital. The hospital is divided into three sections, plastic surgery, orthopedic and neuro-surgery.

Soviet Guerrilla Oath Asked Death for Failure

LONDON.—The oath of Communist guerrilla fighters was broadcast by the Moscow radio as follows:

"I, a citizen of the Great Soviet Union and a true son of the heroic Russian people, swear I will not lay down my arms until the last Fascist in our territory is destroyed.

"I swear I will carry out the orders of my commanders without question and observe strict military discipline.

"For damaging our villages and country, for the death of our children and for terror and tortures inflicted on my people, I swear to revenge myself bitterly, mercilessly and ceaselessly on the enemy.

"I will take an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

"I swear I would rather die in a bitter fight than allow myself and my family or the Soviet people to become Fascist slaves. If by my weakness or cowardice or by ill fate I break this vow and betray the interests of my people, let me die a traitor's death at the hands of my comrades."

Boy Loses Both Legs Taking Forbidden Ride

PITTSBURGH.—Eleven-year-old James Vaughn took a forbidden ride on a shifter engine after school and lost both legs.

The boy was riding on the running board of the shifter, unnoticed by the crew. He slipped as he decided to step off, and fell.

His legs landed across the rail in the path of the wheels.

At St. John's hospital attendants said the boy's condition was critical.

THE PAPERS OF PRIVATE PURKEY

Dear Ma.— I am inclosing a clipping witch has gave me the biggest lift since I was drafted. It is from Camp Stewart down in Georgia and it says that a colonel named Ralph Tobin of the 207th Co a s t Artillery came out against potato peeling in the army. He said he didn't think a soldier should ever wash a dish neither as both take time that could be used in learning how to fight. Well this man Tobin is my choice for top general in the U. S. A. If this clipping gets read much he will be the hero of the army in no time.

This colonel says the German army used a separate organization of kitchen workers to peel potatoes and wash dishes and, ma, that is the key to the way them Nazis fight I guess. With a guaranty that they won't never never have to do no work as kitchen canaries no wonder there morale is so good. He gave a hint that the American army wood organize a trained division of kitchen help soon and I hope he is right. It wood improve the spirit of the whole army and me so much that you wood never no we was the same fellows.

I do not no if there is anything except talk behind this idea but I wish you would mention it in your prayers every night as I am sure the army wood be in better shape to win a war if it could get potatoes, dishes, cooking and general house-work off its mind.

I also wish ma that the army wood organize a division of street cleaners and bath room attendants two on account of that is no work for a soldier neither. It is awful hard for me to feel like a 100 per cent fighting man when I am walking up and down a camp spearing old papers and picking up general rubbish. And I certainly do not feel like no important cog in the arsenal of the democrats when I am in a scrub bucket brigade in the men's room.

They call this fatigue duty in the army and the man who first thought up this name for it had a great sense of word values. It fatigues me to even think of army house-work. I do not get half so tired on an all day hike as I do just thinking of peeling another barrel of potatus or washing dishes.

If I was not a private I wood write a letter to Colonel Tobin saying he is the first smart general the army ever had and that I was for him for President, Secretary of War and the hero of the next Sergeant York picture, but it might get me into trouble like most of my letters do. I wish you and pop wood write him and get all the neighbors to do it. Believe me it has puzzled me how the Heinies could take all those Maggient lines and forts so quick but the hole secret is out. They could concentrate on it instead of on potato peeling.

Well, this will half to be all for now now.

Lots of love, Oscar.

P.S.—Could you find out the address of Myrtle Atwood for me.

Vacation friendships warm the heart

So much that, when you come to part With people you have known a day, "Be sure to look us up," you say, And they in turn insist that you Look them up when you're passing through.

Vanished Men

INSTALLMENT FOURTEEN

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Chibougamau gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottaway river. Red Malone, Garrett Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, arrive at Nottaway posing as surveyors.

"I don't think you'll come back, Constable Malone, good man as you are! It's too bad—too bad! Poor Thistle!" McNab said.

"I wanted to be honest with you and tell you, myself."

Isadore's canoe was out of sight when Blaise and the fretting dog stood beside the loaded Peterboro. Near them Finlay talked with McNab of the message leaving for the steel in the morning. Then the stockade gate opened and Red and Thistle walked slowly toward the shore. McNab turned his head winking hard at the sudden moisture in his eyes.

"What a pair!" said Garry. "She's a lovely girl, McNab. I've worked with him for five years, now, and he's a man, every inch of that six feet three."

"What a pity, Sergeant! If you'd only wait for help—only wait!"

Finlay smiled and shook his head. Walking slowly Red and Thistle approached. She was laughing now, laughing up at him through misty eyes.

"Just like him!" thought Finlay. They stopped near the canoe and Red had her two hands. She flung back her red-gold head and gazed hungrily into his face while he talked.

"Come now!" they heard him say. "Chase the clouds out of those blue eyes! I want to see you smile again before I go. Show your dimples, Lady! Laugh just once more for Red!"

She caught her breath as she smiled up at him, oblivious of them all, then flung her arms about his neck. "I can't let you go, Red!" she sobbed. "You'll never come back to me!"

The others turned away as she clung to him. Later, until the post buildings faded from the sight of those in the canoe, a flutter of white in the clearing marked where a girl waved her farewell.

CHAPTER XIV

Two days later the canoe had passed through Lake Olga of the chain of large lakes and was on the Quiet Water below the Montagnais camp on the island.

"There's the lop-stick spruce David told us to look for!" announced Finlay.

"Ah-hah! David say dat chain of lake lie a mile sout' of here," said Blaise. "We portage to de lake and pass round de Indian waitin' on de riviere, den follow outlet of las' lake to Waswanipi."

In the morning they started packing the canoe and provisions through the spruce, tamarack and Jack-pine, spotted with hardwood, to David's chain of lakes.

Blazing a trail as he traveled, Blaise had reached the first lake with a backload and was returning to pack the canoe through with Finlay when he met the sweating Red bowed under three bags of flour.

Red went on and shortly saw water shimmering through the trees. He was close to the shore when he heard a movement ahead of him in hardwood scrub.

Porcupine, likely, he thought, and kept on.

Then dry twigs snapped in front of him. He lifted his head and looked. Taking deliberate aim with his rifle stood an Indian. Malone pivoted on his heels. With a twist of his head and lift of his shoulders he dropped his backload as the Indian fired. There was a thud as the bullet struck the rolling top bag. With a lunge Red was buried deep in a clump of small fir.

The windless forest vibrated with silence. The Indian who had fired on him could not be far but the brush was so thick he could see nothing. So Red decided to stalk him. With his heavy pistol in his teeth he hunched foot by foot on his elbows until his range of vision had increased to twenty yards.

Around him lances of sunlight thrust through the treetops splashing the underbrush with gold. Still the bush was as soundless as a vacuum. Then a squirrel chattered from somewhere in front and Red smiled. "Ah, there you are!"

He wormed along in the direction of the sound. Then he stiffened suddenly where he lay. Back in the forest rose the guttural "crack-craack!" of the northern raven. Red's eyes snapped as he nodded his head. Shortly the croaking was followed by a dismal "kooer-kooer!"

"Montagnais, say your prayers!" chuckled Malone. "There's a carajou hunting you! That was no raven! That was Blaise's signal!"

Again Red inched his way through young fir and hardwood. But he saw nothing.

Once more the "kooer-kooer!" of the raven startled the forest—much nearer now and followed by a metallic "klunk!"

But Red could not answer. He was too close to deceive Indian ears.

"They're growing nervous! They don't like that old raven moving in on their rear. He's got them guessing. If I could only get a shot I'd start a stampede." But Red's eyes, lancing the undergrowth, found no target.

Then, from deep in the forest drifted the familiar yelp of the aire-dale on a rabbit trail. Flame and Garry! Sweat burst from Red's brow. They must be warned!

There was a sudden movement in the bush. Red lifted his head to catch the fluttering of young fir tops as a dark shape moved through. Once, twice, the .45 roared. Two rifles crashed back in reply. Twigs flew from the saplings where Malone had knelt. But he was already yards away under new cover.

"Thank God! That will stop Garry!" he panted. "There're three of them, at least, but they're worried. When Flame shows up there'll be a circus."

Again the "craack-craack!" of the raven bludgeoned the silence. Nearer now. For a space the stillness beat faintly on Malone's eardrums as he lay nursing his pistol. Then, in the soundless forest lifted a scream that was cut off short as if steel jaws had clamped on a throat.

Red heard a movement in the brush and, rising, saw a disappearing shape. He fired; fired again. There was the "b'rang!" of a Lee-Enfield, the savage challenge of Flame, then the muffled snarl of a dog closing with his enemy; frightened cries mingling with Garry's commands: "No, Flame! Let him up! Let go, Flame!"

Malone thrashed back into the bush to find Finlay holding the maddened aire-dale away from a young Indian sprawled on the ground.

"I can't let you go, Red!"

"You're all right, Red? They did hit you?" cried Garry. "Flame had this boy down when I reached him!"

Nursing his bitten arm, the young Montagnais lifted frightened eyes to the giant who glared down at him.

"It's all right!" soothed Garry. "We won't hurt you!"

"Where's Blaise?" demanded Red. "I didn't get a clean shot but I was afraid you'd walk into them, so fired anyway to warn you. How many were there?"

"This one and two others, I think," replied Finlay, lashing Flame to a tree and starting to examine the shaking boy who watched him with the eyes of a dog.

"Where are you, Blaise?" called Malone. "What was that yell?" Red found Blaise beside a limp shape in the brush.

"Ah-hah!" Brassard was studying the grimacing face from which glazed eyes stared at the sunlit tree tops.

"Recognize him?"

"Ah-hah! We see heem at de islan' at head of lake."

"He'll drink no more of Tete-Blanche's whiskey. What was that scream?"

Brassard opened and closed his steel fingers in a significant gesture. "Dat fallar run into de old raven." The slits of eyes in his granite face glittered. "De raven squeeze him wid his claw."

"Pity it wasn't Batoche or Tete-Blanche!"

"Some day, mebbe!"

Garry bandaged the boy's lacerated arm while Blaise assured him in Cree that he was safe. Slowly recovering from his terror the fifteen year old lad told Brassard his story in Montagnais. He had been forced by his older brothers to join the party Tete-Blanche had sent to block the Quiet Water. They had decided that it was a bank beaver they had heard the night they fired on the Peterboro but Isadore had returned from Matagami the day before and had doubled the night guard on the river. He, Joe Patamish, and the two men lying there in the scrub had packed the canoe to the lake that morning to hunt moose. When they saw freshly cut birch on the shore, they had landed and found Brassard's bags and footprints. So they had decided to ambush the next man over the trail. Patamish had no gun. They had brought him to help carry the meat and the canoe. He had nothing against these white men and wanted to run away. But his companions had threatened to shoot him if he didn't stay. When the firing began he had started to run but the dog had pulled him down.

"Ask him if he believes we've sickened the children with the evil eye as Kinebik says," suggested Garry.

The boy's black eyes glanced at his carefully bandaged arm, then lifted to the faces of the white men and his keen face lighted in a smile. "No," he said to Blaise, "this white man saved me from his dog and bound my arm. He would not sicken children."

"That's the lad, Joe Patamish!" applauded Finlay. "There are brains under that mop of hair. Tell him, Blaise, he's going with us but until we're sure he won't run away, we'll have to tie him up. This kid is going to be useful."

"He'll be very useful," he added. "Now let's get the canoe and the rest of our stuff across this carry."

But the boy had not finished his story. As he talked the furrows cut deep into Blaise's face.

He made a clicking sound with his tongue as he gravely shook his head. "What does he say?" demanded Garry.

"Dere was big fight at de islan'! Chief Wabistan kech Kinebik and Tete-Blanche wid whiskey for Montagnais. Michel Wabistan and two odders was shot. Der is moch trouble for Chief Wabistan."

"Poor Michel!" said Finlay. "He was a good boy! Well, Mr. Isadore, you're rolling up the score against yourself!"

"Joe Patamish say, al-so," continued Blaise, "dat Kinebik make big medicine w'en de August moon is round."

"Red, we'll be there! Now, men, let's get going!"

Through the following night three silent men pushed the Peterboro up Waswanipi bound for their rendezvous with Chief Wabistan.

Malone, whose invincible optimism tolerated no thought of defeat, was deep in dreams of a red-gold head and a pair of laughing eyes back at Matagami.

But as their maple blades put mile after mile of the sleeping lake behind them, in the harassed brains of Finlay and Blaise there was small hope of winning out as only through some miracle of chance could they hope to checkmate the red hunters inflamed by Tete-Blanche's whiskey and Kinebik's magic.

Joe Patamish had told them that most of the young men had left the fishing camps and joined Kinebik's crusade to save the children. Only a handful of Wabistan's relatives and friends had rallied around the chief. And Finlay realized, bitterly, that if he should manage to hang on until the arrival of the police plane, he would be no nearer his goal.

He had come to find the men responsible for the disappearance of Bob Finlay and the others. He had found them but he still had no legal proof of their guilt. And how, with the Montagnais out of control, could he hope to arrest and hold Isadore and Tete-Blanche even for breach of the Indian whiskey law? They'd laugh at him, wipe out his party and disappear, as McNab said, into the musk of the Bitter Water. In his message to headquarters he had asked for a police plane by September first to carry his prisoners south. That plane would arrive too late. Sergeant Garrett Finlay and Constable Malone would then be beyond need of help. And Lise! What would happen to the girl he had promised to see safe at Matagami—who had stormed into his heart that day on the beach? He choked back a groan as he thought of the love that had come so strangely into his life. What would become of Lise?

They slept all day hidden in the timber of the point where Wabistan was to meet them. That night a canoe slid into the beach. Finlay took the old man's bony hand.

"You have lost your son. I am sad," Garry said.

"My son and my people have left me! The heart of Wabistan is sick. Now his knife is sharp like an eagle's beak. His gun is loaded."

"You must eat first," said Finlay, "then let us talk over our pipes beside the fire which is hidden from the lake."

As they ate Moise Wabistan and his father gave to Blaise in their native tongue the story of their finding Tete-Blanche and Kinebik at a Montagnais camp and of the fight that followed.

"Dey say," interpreted Blaise, "de Montagnais was drunk and would not listen w'en dey tell dem Kinebik was a false shaman and work for Isadore. De ole chief start for Kinebik wid his knife! Tete-Blanche shoot Michel and dere was ver' bad time. Dere was too many man for Wabistan and his fre'n to fight and dey leave."

Only Natural

In search of a quiet holiday, Mr. and Mrs. Timms went to stay on a farm. They soon found that even the peaceful country has its drawbacks.

"Those roosters woke me up at dawn again this morning," he growled at breakfast-time.

"Yes," replied his wife, "but you can't blame the birds. Remember that the only morning you ever got up early you crowded about it for a week."

Tenant Purchase

Loans

Tenant purchase loan applications for Will County are still being accepted by the Farm Security Administration H. M. Jordan, county FSA supervisor announces. The applications are being filed for loans for the purchase of family-type farms under provisions of the Department of Agriculture's Tenant Purchase Program.

Mr. Jordan reports that those eligible for the loans are farm renters and farm laborers. Selection will be made from bona fide farm families with sufficient experience or farming background to qualify them for successful farm ownership.

Preference will be given to married persons, with further preference to those with dependent families. The community activity of the applicant and possibilities for becoming permanently established as shown in his past farming record are important considerations. Persons should have sufficient livestock and equipment to carry on farming operations but must be unable to secure credit for farm purchases from other sources, he explained.

Loans for the purchase of farms will be made at the rate of three percent interest with repayments extending over a period of 40 years if desired, or necessary. Needed farm and home improvements and repairs

CAN YOU ANSWER THESE 3 IMPORTANT HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS?

Question 1

How can you use hard fuel during cold weather, yet have automatic heat during the changeable Fall and Spring days?

Answer

Install the new automatic gas detachable Fall-Spring house-heater.

Question 2

How can you get rid of the nuisance of building fires and shutting down during changeable weather?

Answer

Let the new automatic Fall-Spring gas house-heater do the work.

Question 3

When your house is too warm one day and too cold the next, how can you get uniform heat without changing your furnace or hot water boiler?

Answer

The Fall-Spring gas burner is controlled by a thermostat to give uniform heat. Your heating plant is not altered in any way to accommodate the burner.

Ready to be placed in your furnace like this →

And this is all you have to do to keep your house at a comfortable temperature... set the thermostat. The heater operates only when heat is needed... shuts off when the weather warms up.
When steady cold sets in you can quickly remove the gas burner and fire your furnace or hot water boiler with solid fuel.

HALLOWEEN TRICKS FOR OCTOBER'S FAVORITE PARTY
(See Recipes Below)

WITCHES' NIGHT OUT

Spooks and fun while the goblins, black cats and ghosts make merry— isn't that an inspiration to have one grand, merry party before the winter sets in? Come, let's plan stew and brew and set the witches' cauldron boiling and bubbling!

You'll need hearty sandwiches, plentiful and hot since the weather's slightly nipped with frost. Of course you'll have cider and doughnuts because they're wedded together and traditional. To top it off, have a witches' cake, a chocolaty, honest - to - goodness devil's food, moist and crumbly, and perhaps one of those pumpkin shaped molds of ice cream, or at least orange ice, to carry out October's orange and black color scheme.

The party starts as soon as the invitations are sent out. These can be pumpkin, black cat or cauldron shaped, made double with the invitation written on the inside. Send them early so your guests won't make other plans. The more, the merrier.

Twirl some streamers of orange and black crepe paper around the room, bring out the frayed straw hats, checked shirts, and grandmother's costumes from that trunk in the attic. All set? Here we go:

*Sandwiches.

These can be made on the buffet or at the table if you have a sandwich toaster. If made in the kitchen use the broiler. Have assorted bread, butter, place cheese on first layer, then another slice of buttered bread, then a slice of ham, and top with a slice of bread. Toast, cut in three, and fasten with toothpicks.

To bewitch your family and guests completely serve them a cake with that agreeable melt-in-your-mouth quality. Measure the ingredients carefully so you'll attain that feathery lightness so essential to a good cake. After the icing is spread on the cake, make decorations with melted chocolate.

*Witches' Cake.

(Devil's Food)

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double acting baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or shortening
1 cup sugar
2 egg yolks, well beaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt and soda. Sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar, and cream

LYNN SAYS:

A Halloween party can be a success without the least fuss. First of all, decorations and table settings don't have to be letter perfect, for you can have the most fun in the midst of the basement or barn decorated with sheaves of cornstalk, pumpkin faces, rakes, hoes and goblins made of sheets.

For your table use a large piece of burlap or cotton sacks sewed together and dyed scarlet or gold. A centerpiece of pumpkin with candles inside the hollow or fruit and burnished autumn leaves will bring cheers.

Write fortunes and place them in apples or nuts. Play pin the tail on the cat. Bob for apples. Have target practice with bean shooters. Dance the Virginia Reel and other square dances if your floor can stand it—all amid plenty of black and orange crepe paper. Halloween's the time for all this noisy fun.

together until light. Add egg yolks, beat well, then chocolate and blend well. Add flour alternately with milk and beat well each time. Beat until smooth, add vanilla, and fold in egg whites. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in a moderate (350 degrees) oven. Ice with:

Seven Minute Frosting.

2 egg whites
1¼ cups sugar
4 tablespoons water
1½ teaspoons vanilla
¾ teaspoon cream of tartar

Put egg whites, water, sugar, in top of double boiler and set over boiling water. Beat constantly for seven minutes with rotary beater then remove from fire. Add vanilla and cream of tartar and beat until of consistency to spread. Marshmallows (about 12 to 15) cut in pieces may be added.

Speaking of luscious cakes, there's another type of cake which will be just as much of a success either at your Halloween party or cake sale. As different from a chocolate cake as night from day, is this light, tender Silver Moon cake. Its velvety texture is no trick if you use a good shortening and cream it well:

Silver Moon Cake.

½ cup shortening
1¼ cups granulated sugar
2 cups sifted cake flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon almond extract
¾ cup milk
5 egg whites

Cream shortening and sugar until light, then add milk and sifted dry ingredients alternately, beating after each addition until smooth. Fold in stiffly beaten whites and flavoring last. Bake in three layers in a moderate (375 degrees) oven, 25 minutes. Frost with a butter frosting:

Uncooked Butter Icing.

¼ cup butter
¼ cup powdered sugar
3 tablespoons hot milk
1 teaspoon lemon or almond flavoring

Cream butter and shortening, add milk and blend until smooth. Add flavoring. For variation, add 2½ squares semi-sweet chocolate melted before blending in milk. Flavor chocolate icing with vanilla.

A cake that wins a place in the Hall of Fame is this spice cake without which no cake sale is complete. But it isn't just an ordinary spice cake for it has the subtle flavor of bananas combined with the spices:

Spice Cake.

(Makes three 9-inch layers)

½ cup butter
2 cups brown sugar
4 eggs
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon each, cinnamon, nutmeg
½ teaspoon each, allspice, cloves
2½ cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 bananas, mashed fine

Cream together the butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add beaten egg yolks and bananas and blend well. Sift together the dry ingredients twice. Add them alternately with the milk, beating smooth after each addition. Last, fold in egg whites. Bake in three layer pans, in a moderate (350 degrees) oven, for 35 to 40 minutes. Ice between layers with a double recipe of the Seven minute icing or Chocolate flavored uncooked icing. For a fruity spice cake, ½ cup raisins and ½ cup nuts may be added with the flour.

CIVIC RESPONSIBILITY REGARDING BEVERAGE ALCOHOL

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 5:32, 33; 11:26-28; Isaiah 28:1-6; Habakkuk 2:12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34.

Legal approval of the sale of alcoholic beverages has largely taken the matter out of the hands of the home and the church and has made liquor a civic problem. That, of course, does not provide us with a convenient excuse for evading our personal responsibility, for the nation is made up of you and me, of your home and mine, of your church and mine. We must share the nation's responsibility gladly and actively if we are to be worthy of our citizenship. Especially is that true of the Christian, for he sees the spiritual and moral implications of the matter, and he also knows what to do about it.

I. "Righteousness Exalteth a Nation; but Sin is a Reproach to Any People" (Deut. 5:32-33; 11:26-28).

That may sound a bit old-fashioned and it may appear that men have abrogated that principle, but if we wait a bit we shall see that it still works.

1. Righteousness Brings Blessing (Deut. 5:32, 33; 11:26, 27). In this callous and indifferent generation we need to repeat with emphasis the fact that there is laid down in the very constitution of the universe a moral distinction between right and wrong. Right is always right and wrong is always wrong.

The book of Deuteronomy presents the fundamental laws of God. In this fifth chapter there is a review of many of these laws and a practical appeal for obedience. It is pointed out that the way of liberty in the walk of life is to turn neither to the extreme of legal bondage nor to the opposite extreme of human license, but to "walk in all the ways which the Lord your God hath commanded you." Walking in His ways brings all the blessings of Deuteronomy 5:33, a promise which is repeated in 11:27.

2. Unrighteousness Brings Judgment (Deut. 11:28). Turning aside from God's ways must bring upon man His curse. It is no light matter to be under God's disapproval. We who know how much the approval or disapproval of frail human beings around us may mean, should consider what it means in the life of a man (or of a nation) to have the eternal, omnipresent and omnipotent God against him.

Then what about a people which countenances the manufacture and the sale of intoxicants, which they well know bring about wickedness and vice which can only call for the judgment of God. Many believe that the great war in which the world is embroiled is simply God's judgment upon the nations (including England and America) because they have turned aside from His holy ways. That means that the most effective way to stop the conflict is national penitence and prayer. Why not believe and practice II Chronicles 7:14?

II. Civic Greatness Cannot Be Built on Sin and Oppression (Isa. 28:1-6; Hab. 2:12).

Yes, that sounds old-fashioned too! The theory of today seems to be that the road to greatness is by way of disregard of God's laws, and by the application of the mailed fist of cruel conquest. But let us remember that others have tried the same violation of God's law, and let us recall what happened to them. Did you ever hear of Napoleon?—of Alexander the Great?—of the "glory that was Greece"?—and the world conquering power of ancient Rome? Modern military leaders could well afford to spend less time on their books of strategy and their war maps and more time reading the Bible and the pages of history.

1. Drunkenness and National Decay Go Together (Isa. 28:1-6). The leaders of Israel (Ephraim) lingered long over their wine bowls as they spoke with pride of their nation, and especially of Samaria, its crown. It was a city beautifully situated on a hillside surrounded by a fertile terraced hillside.

Does not that all have a vaguely familiar sound? A great nation of our day which now lies in bondage to its neighbor dictator not long ago spoke with pride of its attainments and its security, while (according to the testimony of its own leaders) the use of intoxicants went on apace, even in the army.

2. Permanent Power Cannot Be Built on Oppression (Hab. 2:12). Here again history reveals the correctness of Scripture. Many a nation has sought to find its "place in the sun" by building with the blood of its vanquished enemies. It has never worked, and it will fail now just as it has in the past.

What about the city, state, or nation that attempts to promote its own growth out of the taxes on liquor and its sale?

This Far-Seeing Father Was Taking No Chances

As Smith and Jones were waiting at the bus stop, a passer-by stopped and asked Jones the time. Jones did not reply.

After the stranger had passed on, Smith asked:

"Why didn't you answer him?"

"Well, it's this way," Jones replied. "If I'd told him the time, he might have got chatting, and in the end I might have asked him home to supper."

"There he might have met my daughter and they might have fallen in love. Finally they might have got married."

"And let me tell you, I don't want a fellow for my son-in-law who can't afford to buy a watch."

Witness Finally Admitted Stronger Force's Influence

Cross-examining a witness on the other side, an attorney tried by every means possible to discredit him.

"You tell us you came to the city in search of work," he said meaningly. "I put to you that there was another, a stronger, motive which brought you all that distance. Isn't that so?"

The witness hesitated a time, then slowly replied, "Well, yes, there was."

"Ah!" exclaimed the barrister triumphantly, "Now tell the court what it was."

"A locomotive," replied the witness blandly.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness, under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nationwide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

The floor in the gym has received the final coat of varnish and the only breaks in the glistening surface are the black lines which mark off the basketball court. All metal, fan shaped back boards and goals of the latest type are being installed and should be ready for duty in a few days.

New equipment has been received for the farm and industrial shop, including all steel drafting tables with individual lockers for tools and drawing board, an Atlas engine lathe, a Delta power table saw, a floor model drill press, a wood turning lathe and an electric arc welder.

The basketball team has been working out under the tutelage of Coach Ellwood and a schedule of games has been arranged and will be announced in the next issue.

Mr. Harlan has received several inquiries in regard to starting a band and if enough interest is shown in this project, he says he would be glad to instruct and direct such an organization.

A school Halloween party is being planned and the following committee has been named to have charge of the arrangements: June Schussler, Ruth Gee, Howard Braasch, Hilda Zerbis, Franklin Homering and June Fidler.
